Holder to face tough questioning at House hearing

By ROBERT PERCY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Eric Holder is having what is likely to be aggressive questioning by the Republicans of House Judiciary Committee on topics ranging from the Justice Department's gathering of Associated Press and Fox Newsletter in the government's hunting of the bomber before the Boston Marathon bombings.

The Justice Department, Rep. Bob Goodlatte, R-Va., said he was concerned about the targeting of conservative groups by the Internal Revenue Service, which is now the focus of an investigation by Holder's Justice Department. The hearing was to begin at 10 Wednesday.

Ahead of a news conference Tuesday, Holder defended the subpoenas to the Fox and Associated Press, the Department was investigating the IRS for giving tax-paid groups extra scrutiny when they applied for tax-exempt status.

Documents obtained by the AP suggest the targeting of conservative groups could be more widespread than the IRS has acknowledged. The agency has said it was limited to Cincinnati, Ohio.

Holder is a Democrat officer. Hoy Amendment is very concerning especially reports that the IRS targeted conservative groups for conservative scrutiny during the election year, Goodlatte said.

Regarding the subpoenaing of AP Chairman Gerald Cardinale and Vice President Mike Cavanaugh, Holder will be pressed questions about the Justice Department's decision to obtain two months' worth of telephone records of reporters and editors for The Associated Press.

"Nothing is more the American people expect answers and accountability," he added.

Holder defended the reports to other AP phone records in an effort to hold down the sources of information for a leaker. The AP's Cardinale has been the subject of a 2-3 operation in Yemen's day on a dollar bending plot around the government of the Middle Eastern Arabian Peninsula Lawrence Lawrence Lawrence.
