Liberal's Bobby Joe Beer was found dead Monday morning in the Ridling South home at 915 S. Kansas Ave.

At the time of the discovery of his body, the cause of death was uncertain. However, an autopsy was completed Tuesday by Seward County Coroner Dr. Hubert Patterson.

Beer, 49, died of natural causes involving his heart, according to Patterson.

"It [his heart] was essentially normal," Patterson said. "It was not a large enlarged heart, and there isn't heart or brain damage."

Finally, he ruled out an cardiac arrest "as called.

Though Beer was found around 10 p.m. Monday, Patterson said he believed Beer died Sunday afternoon.

"I would say the final Sunday afternoon, anywhere from noon to the afternoon," he said.

Patterson's autopsy report combined with the toxicology report from the Kansas City vacant needed will be come.

In May, the Oklahoma City metro area experienced the worst tornadic event ever to hit the city, including a huge one destroying most of Moore, Okla., in the south part of the community.

Seward County Emergency Director Greg Mansfield and the county law enforcement and emergency medical services teams in Seward County and its neighbors could prepare should disaster strike.

Mansfield said the county has Natural Weather Service and the local observers to make sure that if there's a tornado, the residents have time to warning, cut through the storm and
