Plans offer array of options

'We need people to tell us what they want,' school district says

Despite single-digit temperatures, a group of more than 20 people turned out for the first of four community meetings sponsored by USD 480 Monday night at the Seward County Sales Building. The two-hour meeting offered Liberal residents a chance to review the possible options for a school bond issue and give feedback about what they want — and how much they'd be willing to pay.

"There are a lot of ideas that are in the thing you have," said USD consultant Paul Kelly. "We can get you pretty close, but it comes with a price tag."
