Robert Davis, Extension agent for the University of Missouri, explains how to plant and care for various types of plants.

Planting tips, when real spring arrives

By Robert Davis

Despite the fact that many people are already off to work, the weather is still in the "in-between" zone. It's not quite warm enough to plant in the garden, and it's not quite cold enough to plant in the house. The weather is just what you need to get your plants started. It's not too hot, not too cold, and just what you need to get your plants started. It's not too hot, not too cold, and just what you need to get your plants started. It's not too hot, not too cold, and just what you need to get your plants started.

Garden City school district community approach differs from that of Liberal

By [Name]

Garden City school district officials say their approach to budgeting is different from that of Liberal. The district is looking for ways to save money while maintaining the quality of education. They are looking at various options, including cutting back on non-essential services and finding ways to increase efficiency. The goal is to ensure that the district can continue to provide a high-quality education for all students.

DINOSAURS INVADING LIBERAL
After a million year slumber, dinosaurs are invading Liberal. The event features a variety of dinosaur exhibits, including skeletons, models, and interactive displays. It's a great opportunity for families to learn about these prehistoric creatures. The event is held in a large outdoor area, so it's perfect for a picnic and a day of fun. Don't miss this exciting event!
