SW Guidance Center director talks about state's new mental health plan

By ROBERT FRYER
The new mental health plan for North Carolina, unveiled last week, will be a landmark in the state's history of mental health care, says the director of the Southwest Guidance Center. The plan, which is the result of a year-long effort by the state's mental health providers, will be a landmark in the state's history of mental health care, says the director of the Southwest Guidance Center.
