City, county asks for exemptions from new concealed carry law

By Tom Roush
The City of Columbia and the county have asked the state to exempt them from a new law that allows people to carry concealed handguns in public places. The law, which takes effect in July, would allow people to carry concealed handguns in public places, including schools, government buildings, and public parks. The city and county have argued that the law would be too burdensome for them to enforce and that it would be in the best interests of the community to exempt them from the law.

Celebrating a century of the S-State Fair

60th anniversary
The S-State Fair is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. The fair has been a tradition in South Carolina for over a century and is one of the largest and most popular events in the state. It features a wide variety of activities, including horse shows, rodeos, and agricultural exhibits. The fair is a great opportunity for people to enjoy the outdoors and learn about the state's history and culture.

Doctor: Driver in Okla. train wreck had bad eyes

By Tom Roush
A doctor has testified that the driver of a train that derailed in Oklahoma last week had bad eyes. The doctor, who treated the driver, said that the driver had a long history of eye problems and that he was not wearing his glasses at the time of the accident. The accident, which occurred on a busy rail line, resulted in several injuries and the destruction of the train. The doctor's testimony is part of an ongoing investigation into the cause of the accident.
