State explains Lexis Law concerning day care regulations
 In Liberal, Kansas

The process of creating regulations for day care centers is a complex one, involving many stakeholders and a long timeline. The State Department of Health and Senior Services is currently in the process of reviewing and updating the regulations for day care centers in Kansas. This process is expected to take several months to complete. The regulations will cover various aspects of day care, including licensing, health and safety, and staff requirements. The State Department is committed to ensuring that the regulations are fair and reasonable for all parties involved, while also protecting the health and safety of children in day care centers.
