No cop, no stop

Utah Pacific program catches drivers ignoring deadly warnings

Utah Pacific Railroad (UPRR) has implemented a new program to catch drivers who ignore deadly warnings. The program involves installing cameras at various points along the railroad tracks to monitor for illegal crossings.

The program is designed to identify drivers who fail to stop at railroad crossings when the lights are flashing. This is a serious offense that can result in fines and license suspension. The cameras will provide evidence to law enforcement to take action against these drivers.

UPRR has a long history of safety and is committed to protecting the lives of its employees and the public. This program is a key part of its safety efforts. By identifying and addressing illegal crossings, UPRR can help prevent accidents and ensure the safe operation of its trains.

City looks at strategic plan for future

Plan calls for slight changes in core cities

The city is looking at a strategic plan for the future. The plan includes several key initiatives to improve the city's infrastructure and services. These include investments in public transportation, housing, and economic development.

The plan also calls for slight changes in the core cities. This includes re-evaluating zoning laws and land use policies to better accommodate the city's growth. The goal is to create a more sustainable and vibrant urban environment.

The city's leadership is committed to working with the community to develop and implement this strategic plan. By listening to the needs and concerns of residents, the city can ensure that the plan reflects the best interests of everyone.
