Routine blood test saved baby's life

MCADD a silent killer for many

A 14-month-old boy, who looks like the healthy, chubby baby he is, has a heart-breaking secret. His parents, Colleen and Morgan, know that only hours after his birth, he was a typical orange from death.

Colleen and Morgan know that their son, who is now 14 months old, was born with a rare genetic condition called medium-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency (MCADD). The condition is a type of fatty acid oxidation disorder that can cause a child to have a severe metabolic crisis, which can be fatal.

Colleen and Morgan were told that their son had MCADD when he was born. They were told that the condition was rare and that they would need to be very careful of what they fed their son. They were told that they would need to be very careful of what they fed their son.
