Routine blood test saved baby's life

MCADD a silent killer for many

At the age of 4 months, Jordan Colson Barnd looks like the healthiest, happiest baby in the world. His parents, Colson and Morgan Barnd, look at their son, they know that only knows after his birth, he was a typical orange from death.

After the initial diagnosis in May 2012, Jordan's parents were told that their son had a rare genetic disorder called medium-chain acyl-CoA dehydrogenase deficiency (MCADD). The condition is a rare genetic disorder that affects the body's ability to break down fatty acids for energy. It is a silent killer for many children, as it can lead to a sudden death if not diagnosed and treated early.
