Judge: Oklahoma can sue government for Obamacare

Change: Two
 The Oklahoma Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the state can sue the federal government for the Affordable Care Act, known as Obamacare. The ruling is a significant victory for the state's conservative judges, who have long opposed the federal health care law. The court's decision allows the state to challenge the constitutionality of the law in court. The ruling is expected to lead to further legal battles between the state and the federal government over the implementation of the law.
