Allegiant: 1 in 10 tickets affected by MD-80 rehab

COMMENTS: Sydney (AP) — A four-hour delay on Monday morning grounded a jet packed with 370 passengers in Sydney, Australia, after a snake was spotted on the tarmac. The jet, a Boeing 747-400, was bound for Los Angeles and was carrying 370 passengers and 17 crew members. The aircraft was grounded for about 45 minutes before the snake was removed. The airline said it was not sure where the snake came from, but it was found on the tarmac. The jet was eventually able to take off for Los Angeles.
