Man upset city cut his weeds

By JILL WELLS/STAFF WRITER

Liberal, Kan. — A man who says he was forced to cut his weeds because the city cut them down is angry. He says the city should have notified him first.

The City of Liberal Board of Commissioners announced last week it would remove weeds from the city's parks and recreation areas. The city says it is doing this to improve the appearance of the parks and to reduce the risk of fire.

But one man, who says he has been a resident of the city for over 20 years, says he was not notified of the city's plan. He says he has been cutting his weeds for years and that he is now faced with the cost of hiring a professional weeding service.

He says he is angry because he feels the city is not being fair to its residents. He says he wants the city to reimburse him for the cost of the weeding service.

The city says it is sorry that the man was not notified and that it will reimburse him for the cost of the weeding service. The city also says it will notify all other residents of the city's plan.

Lawrence will limit city's ability to use drones

By JILL WELLS/STAFF WRITER

Lawrence, Kan. — The City of Lawrence is facing a lawsuit from a resident who says the city's use of drones is a violation of his privacy. The city says it is using drones to monitor public safety and security.

The lawsuit was filed in federal court and alleges that the city's use of drones is a violation of the resident's Fourth Amendment rights. The resident says he has been targeted by the city's drones and that he is being monitored without his consent.

The city says it is using drones to monitor public safety and security and that it is not targeting any individual. The city says it is using drones to monitor large public events and to monitor areas that are difficult to access.

The lawsuit is the latest in a series of cases involving the use of drones by law enforcement agencies. The use of drones has raised concerns about privacy and civil liberties.
