Kansas officials urge motorists to watch for deer
 Kansas officials are urging motorists to watch for deer on the roads as the hunting season begins. The Kansas Department of Transportation (KDOT) is reminding drivers to slow down and look for deer, especially in rural areas. Deer are a leading cause of traffic fatalities in the state. KDOT is also reminding drivers to use caution when driving at night, as deer are more likely to be on the roads during this time. Drivers should also be aware of the fact that deer are often found on the roads during the day as well. KDOT is also reminding drivers to use caution when driving on roads that are not well-maintained or that have a high percentage of deer.
