Mental health care suffers drought season
Cuts cause 'unnecessary suffering, raises risk of crisis'
BY NICHOLE COHEN
A lack of funding for mental health services in New Jersey is causing "unnecessary suffering" and raising the risk of crisis for many people, according to a report from the state's Department of Human Services. The report, released last week, says that cuts to mental health services have led to a significant increase in the number of people who are hospitalized for mental health issues. It also notes that the state's mental health system is in a state of "crisis" and that more funding is needed to address the problem.
