Building relationships with Bright Futures
Bright Futures aims to connect community schools
By Mark C. Collins
By 10 years from now, a new wave of Bright Futures schools is likely to be in operation across the state. The program, which is a partnership between the state and local school districts, is designed to help students in underserved areas get the same quality of education as those in more affluent areas. The program is a key part of the state's effort to improve its education system.

Government reopens after Congress ends 16-day shutdown
The federal government has resumed operations after a 16-day shutdown. The shutdown was caused by a disagreement between the House and the Senate over the budget. The government has now reopened, and all federal agencies are back to work. The shutdown was the longest in the history of the United States.
