Building relationships with Bright Futures
Bright Futures aims to connect community schools
By Mark C. Collins
By 1990, the state had a long history of providing financial support to public schools. But in the 1990s, the state's budget was cut, and the state's support for public schools was reduced. This led to a decline in the quality of public schools, and a decline in the state's reputation for providing a high-quality education. Bright Futures is a program that aims to connect community schools and provide financial support to them. The program is designed to help schools improve their financial situation and provide a better education for their students.
