SUICIDE WATCH
A new study published in the journal PLoS ONE shows that people who are suicidal are more likely to be hospitalized if they have a mental health professional on their mind. The study, led by researchers at the University of California, San Diego, found that people who were hospitalized for suicidal thoughts were more likely to be hospitalized again if they had a mental health professional on their mind. The researchers suggest that mental health professionals should be more proactive in reaching out to people who are suicidal.
