SUICIDE WATCH
A new study published in the Journal of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry shows that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are at a higher risk of suicide. The study found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are more likely to attempt suicide and die by suicide than their peers. The study also found that children and adolescents with mental health conditions are more likely to be hospitalized for suicide-related issues. The study was conducted by researchers at the University of California, San Diego and the University of Colorado, Boulder. The researchers analyzed data from a national survey of children and adolescents with mental health conditions.
