Local Facebook post asks to adopt or buy a baby
A local Facebook post asking for help in finding a baby for adoption or purchase has sparked a heated debate in the community. The post, which was posted by a user named 'Baby for Sale', asked if anyone knew of anyone who had a baby for sale or adoption. The post was quickly removed by Facebook, but it had already spread to other social media platforms. The community is divided on the issue, with some people arguing that it is a way to help a child in need, while others believe it is dehumanizing and unethical.

Lawyers seek dismissal of Kansas murder charge
A Kansas man accused of murdering a woman in 2007 is seeking to have his murder charge dismissed. The man, who is currently in custody, has a long criminal record and is facing multiple charges. His lawyers argue that the state's case against him is weak and that he should be released. The state's attorney general has refused to drop the charges, and the case is set to go to trial next month.

Maybe Nov. 30 before healthcare.gov is fixed
The Obama administration says it may not be able to launch the new health care website, healthcare.gov, until after Nov. 30. The website is supposed to be the central hub for Americans to buy health insurance under the Affordable Care Act. However, the website has been plagued with technical problems since it was first launched in September. The administration is working to fix these problems as quickly as possible, but it is unclear when the website will be fully operational.
