County looks to spend $100K to stop concealed carry in 2 buildings

Commission may request 4-year exemption from concealed carry law before spending on security

Lawrence County is looking to spend about $100,000 to install security cameras and other measures to prevent concealed carry in two buildings, according to a report from the county commission.

The commission is considering a resolution to request a four-year exemption from the state's concealed carry law for the two buildings. The exemption would allow the county to install security cameras and other measures to prevent concealed carry in the buildings.

The buildings are the county's main office and the county's law enforcement training center. The commission is also considering a resolution to request a four-year exemption from the state's concealed carry law for the two buildings.
