Home electricity use in US falling to 2001 levels

Home electricity use in the United States is falling to levels not seen since 2001, according to a report from the U.S. Energy Information Administration. The report says that residential electricity consumption in the U.S. fell by 1.7 percent in the third quarter of 2013 compared with the same period last year.

BETTER GADGETS

Smartphones and tablets are driving down electricity use, according to the report. The report also notes that energy-efficient appliances are becoming more widely available.
