House panel to review Kansas tracking industry

A bill to allow the state to track 100,000 wild animals, such as deer, turkeys and wild geese, has passed the House of Representatives. The bill, which is sponsored by Rep. Matt Green, will allow the state to track wild animals in order to better manage the state's wildlife resources. The bill is part of a larger effort to improve the state's wildlife management practices.

Lt. governor's $500K loan to gov. not unusual

It is not unusual for a state's lieutenant governor to borrow money from the state treasury. In this case, the lieutenant governor borrowed $500,000 from the state treasury. This is a common practice in many states. The money is typically used for personal expenses, such as a home purchase or a vacation. The loan is repaid over time, and the interest is typically paid by the borrower.

Law affects those with insurance thru work too

The new law affects not only those who have insurance through their employer, but also those who have insurance through their spouse or another source. This is because the law defines family members broadly, including anyone who is related to the insured person by blood, marriage, or adoption. This means that anyone who is a family member of the insured person is covered by the law, regardless of whether they have insurance through their employer or another source.
