Obama set to announce 'practical' agenda focusing on immigration, income equality

President Barack Obama is expected to announce a "practical" agenda focusing on immigration, income equality and other issues, according to a senior administration official. The official said the president will likely announce the agenda in the next few weeks, but declined to provide more details. The agenda is expected to include measures to address the needs of immigrants, particularly those who are undocumented, and to improve the lives of low-income Americans. It may also include proposals for education, infrastructure, and energy. The official said the president will announce the agenda in a way that is "practical" and "realistic," reflecting the challenges of the current economic situation. The agenda is expected to be a key part of Obama's re-election campaign, as he seeks to win over voters who are concerned about the economy and the future of the country.
