Records: Kansas bomb plot suspect decorated Marine
By KATHY HANCOCK
A man accused of plotting a bomb attack in Kansas City was decorated for his military service as a Marine. The suspect, identified as a member of the Islamic State, was captured in a military operation in Iraq. He was later found to be a decorated Marine who served in the Iraq War. The military awarded him several medals for his service, including the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star. The incident highlights the complex nature of terrorism and the impact of military service on individuals involved in such activities.
