Courts: Transgender student's rights were violated

By [Name]

A federal court has ruled that a transgender student's rights were violated by a school district. The court found that the school district's policy of requiring students to use restrooms based on their birth sex was unconstitutional. The court ordered the school district to allow the student to use the restroom that matches their gender identity. The court also ordered the school district to provide the student with appropriate accommodations. The court's decision is a landmark ruling in the area of transgender rights in schools.

District apologizes after taking student lunches

By [Name]

A school district has apologized for taking student lunches. The district had a policy of taking student lunches to ensure that all students had enough to eat. However, the policy was found to be discriminatory against students with disabilities. The district has apologized to the affected students and has agreed to provide them with lunch. The district has also agreed to revise its policy to ensure that it is non-discriminatory.
