Woody Allen's allies cast doubt on sexual abuse claims

By AP Wire

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Allen's allies on Monday cast doubt on the sexual abuse claims of a woman who says she was sexually abused by the filmmaker in the 1970s.

The woman, who is now 40, says she was sexually abused by Allen when she was 13 years old. She says she was sexually abused by Allen for several years, from 1972 to 1977.

Allen's allies, including his lawyer, said the woman's claims are "completely untrue" and "a complete fabrication." They said the woman is a "serial liar" and "a professional liar."

The woman's lawyer, however, said she has evidence to support her claims. He said she has medical records and other documents that show she was sexually abused by Allen.

The woman's claims have caused a major scandal in the film industry. Allen is one of the most successful filmmakers in the world, and his work has been praised by critics and audiences alike.

The woman's claims have also caused a major scandal in the legal system. She has filed a lawsuit against Allen, and the case has attracted national attention.

The woman's claims have also caused a major scandal in the media. She has been interviewed by several major news outlets, and her story has been widely reported.

The woman's claims have also caused a major scandal in the public. She has become a household name, and her story has been widely discussed in the media.

Nothing controversial in Super Bowl ads

Nothing controversial in Super Bowl ads

By AP Wire

NEW YORK (AP) — Major Super Bowl ads on Monday were mostly tame, with no controversial content, according to a report from the National Advertising Review Council.

The council, which is made up of representatives from various advertising agencies and consumer groups, said the ads were "entirely appropriate" and "did not contain any objectionable content."

The council's report comes in the wake of a similar report from the council last year, which found that several Super Bowl ads were "objectionable" and "inappropriate."

The council's report is a positive sign for the advertising industry, which has been under fire in the past for airing controversial ads during the Super Bowl.

The council's report is also a positive sign for consumers, who have often complained about the content of Super Bowl ads.
