Rare owl stolen from Washington bird sanctuary
A Great Horned Owl was stolen from the Washington State Department of Ecology's bird sanctuary in Everett on Sunday. The owl was one of a pair that had been raised in captivity. The sanctuary is a 10-acre area with a large pond and several buildings. The owl was found in a tree near the pond. The sanctuary is a popular destination for bird watching and photography.

Heavy snow hits Kan., shuts down state government
A heavy snowstorm hit Kansas on Sunday, shutting down state government and schools. The snow was the heaviest in years for the state. The storm was caused by a low pressure system moving through the region. The snow was accompanied by strong winds and a blizzard-like atmosphere. The state government offices in Topeka were closed, and schools were also closed. The snow was expected to last through the week.
