

When you don't know what you are doing, do it neatly.
Comments by Marjorie Sperry in Columns & Opinion | February 17, 2014
I am a neat freak. I have a clean, organized home and office. I am a neat freak.

Whereas the huge piece of equipment headed Saturday after it made its way through Liberal! Page 4A

County to get update on prairie chicken listing

By the Staff
The Colorado Department of Natural Resources is set to release a report on the status of the prairie chicken, a species that has been listed as a threatened species under the federal Endangered Species Act. The report will be released in the next few weeks and will provide an update on the species' status and the actions being taken to protect it. The prairie chicken is a ground-dwelling bird that is found in the western United States. It is a member of the pheasant family and is known for its distinctive call. The species has declined significantly in range and numbers since it was listed as a threatened species in 1983. The report will provide an update on the species' status and the actions being taken to protect it.

LEADER & TIMES

Your daily news source for 127 years

Setting on a good AirFair

No global warming for 17 years 3 months — a Monckton Analysis

By Peter Dinkov
A new analysis by a leading climate skeptic suggests that global temperatures have not risen significantly over the past 17 years and 3 months. The analysis, conducted by James Hansen's former aide, Peter Dinkov, challenges the widely held belief that global temperatures are rising rapidly due to human-caused climate change. Dinkov's analysis is based on a re-examination of the data used by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) to support its claims. He argues that the data has been manipulated to show a clear upward trend, when in fact the data shows a much more complex and less clear trend. His analysis suggests that the IPCC's claims of global warming are based on flawed data and methodology. He also suggests that the IPCC's claims are part of a larger effort to scare the public and justify increased government control over the economy and society.

LA workers break record for largest concrete pour

By the Staff
Construction workers in Los Angeles have set a new record for the largest concrete pour in the city's history. The record was set during the construction of a new building at the intersection of Hollywood Boulevard and Vine Street. The pour involved the simultaneous placement of 10,000 cubic yards of concrete over a 100,000-square-foot area. The project was completed in just a few days, a feat that has never been achieved before in the city. The record was set by a team of workers from the Los Angeles area, who worked long hours to complete the project. The record is a testament to the skill and dedication of the construction workers in Los Angeles.

John Kerry mocks those who deny climate change

By the Staff
U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry has mocked those who deny the existence of climate change. In a speech to the United Nations, Kerry said that those who deny climate change are "in denial" and are "ignoring the science." He said that the world is facing a "real and dire threat" from climate change, and that it is time for the world to take action to address the threat. Kerry's speech was part of a larger effort to raise awareness of the issue of climate change and to urge the world to take action to address the threat. He said that the world is facing a "real and dire threat" from climate change, and that it is time for the world to take action to address the threat.

Endangered person advisory for teenage Mo. girl

By the Staff
A teenage girl in Missouri has been named as an endangered person by the state's Department of Social Services. The girl, who is 16 years old, has been identified as being at risk of harm or abuse. The Department of Social Services has issued an advisory to the public, asking for information about the girl's whereabouts and any potential threats to her safety. The girl's identity has been kept confidential to protect her privacy. The Department of Social Services is working to locate the girl and provide her with the support and protection she needs. The advisory is a warning to the public to be on the lookout for the girl and to report any information to the Department of Social Services.