A man accused of murdering a woman in Garden City, Mo., has pleaded guilty to the crime. The man, 34, was charged with the murder of 31-year-old Jennifer L. Smith on Oct. 13, 2012, in the city's southeast quadrant. The woman was found in her home, and the man was arrested on Oct. 14. He is currently in the custody of the Missouri State Penitentiary in Jefferson City.

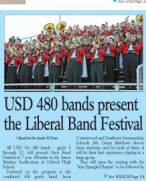

Natural gas offers value as propane prices soar

PHOTOGRAPH BY CHRIS BROWN FOR KANSAS CITY STAR
Natural gas offers a more stable and affordable alternative to propane as prices for the latter continue to rise. Propane prices have increased significantly in recent months, reaching their highest levels in years. This is due to a combination of factors, including a tight supply and high demand. Natural gas, on the other hand, remains a more consistent and cost-effective option for heating and cooking.

Kan. students lobby against sex education bills

Five-year anniversary of Obama's stimulus renews partisan fight over jobs, economy

Legislation that would require sex education to be taught in all schools has been introduced in the Kansas Legislature. The bill, known as the Comprehensive Sex Education Act, has drawn significant opposition from students and parents across the state. They argue that such education is inappropriate for young children and that it promotes a particular moral agenda. The bill is currently in committee, and its fate remains uncertain.

Inmate released after more than 4 years in prison

The Kansas Department of Corrections has announced the release of an inmate who has spent more than four years in prison. The inmate, a 34-year-old man, was released after serving a sentence for a crime committed in 2009. His release has sparked debate about the state's prison system and the effectiveness of its sentencing policies. Some argue that the inmate's long incarceration is a waste of resources, while others believe that the sentence was justified.
