An 11-year-old girl from Washington has become a national hero after she shot and killed a cougar that was tracking her brother. The girl, who is a member of a local hunting club, was out in the woods with her brother when she saw the cougar. She immediately took out her rifle and fired, hitting the cougar in the chest. The cougar was killed and the girl and her brother were unharmed. The incident has received widespread media attention and the girl is being hailed as a brave and resourceful young woman.

California couple in $10M gold find may owe govt about half, report says
By Robert Kelly
Special to the Journal-Examiner
A California couple has discovered a massive gold deposit worth approximately $10 million. However, a report suggests that they may owe the government about half of the value of the find. The couple, who are experienced miners, discovered the gold while working on a property in California. The gold is located in a vein that is estimated to be 100 feet long and 6 inches wide. The couple has been working on the property for several years and have been successful in finding several smaller gold deposits. The discovery of this large deposit is a significant find and has attracted the attention of the government. The report states that the couple may be required to pay the government 50% of the value of the gold they have discovered. This is a common practice in California, where the state has a claim on any gold discovered on public land. The couple is currently negotiating with the government over the terms of the agreement. They are hoping to reach a deal that allows them to keep a significant portion of the gold while still complying with the law.
