TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The Kansas Senate on Friday rejected a measure that would have required the state to build a common core curriculum for its schools. The measure, which would have required the state to build a common core curriculum for its schools, was defeated by a 21-16 vote. The measure would have required the state to build a common core curriculum for its schools, which would have been a significant step towards standardizing education across the state.
