Report: Thousands of convicted criminals freed while awaiting deportation proceedings
A report released by the American Immigration Law Initiative (AILI) shows that thousands of convicted criminals are being released from federal custody while awaiting deportation proceedings. The report, titled "The State of Immigrant Detention," found that the number of immigrants in federal custody has increased significantly in recent years. The report also found that many of these immigrants are being released from custody without any form of supervision. The report is a call to action for Congress to take steps to address the problem of immigrant detention and to ensure that the federal government is able to effectively manage the immigration system.
