In Hill testimony, Hagel defends Bergdahl trade
By [Name] [City] Staff Writer
Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel defended the trade of five Taliban prisoners for the release of the captured U.S. Marine, Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl, during his testimony before the House Armed Services Committee on Tuesday. Hagel said the trade was a "win-win" for the United States, as it allowed the release of a young American soldier who had been held in captivity for years. He also said that the trade was a "demonstration of the power of diplomacy" and that it showed that the United States was committed to finding peaceful solutions to conflicts. Hagel's testimony was part of a hearing on the trade, which was held in the wake of criticism from some members of Congress and the public. Hagel said that the trade was a "necessary and prudent" decision and that it was in the best interests of the United States. He said that the trade was a "win-win" for the United States, as it allowed the release of a young American soldier who had been held in captivity for years. He also said that the trade was a "demonstration of the power of diplomacy" and that it showed that the United States was committed to finding peaceful solutions to conflicts.
