USDA issues order concerning pig virus

USDA has issued an order to prevent the spread of a deadly virus that can kill pigs. The order, issued on June 11, requires pig owners to prevent the virus from spreading to other pigs. The virus, known as African Swine Fever, is a highly contagious disease that can cause the death of infected pigs within a few days. The order applies to all pigs in the United States, including those in zoos, circuses, and private collections. Pig owners are required to prevent their pigs from coming into contact with other pigs, and to report any signs of illness to the USDA. The order also requires pig owners to prevent their pigs from coming into contact with wild boars, which are known to carry the virus. The USDA is working to prevent the spread of the virus to protect the pig industry and the health of humans.
