Justices: Can't make employers cover contraception
The Supreme Court ruled in the Wheat case that employers can't be forced to pay for their employees' contraception. The ruling is a victory for religious and moral conservatives who have long argued that the government is oversteering when it forces employers to fund birth control. The court's decision is a 5-4 vote, with the majority opinion written by Justice Alito. The dissenting opinion was written by Justice Sotomayor. The ruling is expected to have a significant impact on the healthcare industry and on the lives of many Americans.

United plane's evacuation slide deploys mid-flight
A United Airlines flight from Chicago to Los Angeles experienced a mid-flight emergency when the evacuation slide deployed unexpectedly. The flight was carrying 150 passengers and the crew was able to safely land at Los Angeles International Airport. The evacuation slide was deployed from the rear of the aircraft and the passengers were able to evacuate safely. The incident was caused by a malfunction in the slide's deployment mechanism. The airline is investigating the cause of the incident and is working to prevent similar incidents in the future.
